

Application Features

Users are able to register, login, create posts, like posts, delete posts, and view all of their posts under their profile page.

Login/Register

Only existing users are allowed to enter the blog through the login button, and they cannot register with their existing username. If they try to register, an error message pops up that says, "Username already exists." Only non-registered users are allowed to register, but they cannot enter the blog through the login until after they register. If they try to login, an error message that says "Invalid username" will appear.

User Features: Create, Delete, Like

Once logged in, users can create, delete, and like posts. Users can only delete their own posts and like posts that are not their own. There is no like button under a user's own post, and no delete buttons under posts other than the user's posts.

Viewing Posts

When users create posts, their new post will appear at the top. All posts are displayed in order with most recent posts at the top and the oldest posts at the bottom.

The left image is after the user GreenThumbPlanter made a new post. The right is after the user deleted one of their posts at the bottom, titled “slow day.”

Profile Viewing

Users can view their own profile information and see all the posts they have created under their profile page. They can see their avatar (the first letter of their username), username, membership date, and their total number of posts.

Summary

All the features listed above are fully functional. However, there is currently minimal styling, which will be fixed. And there will be a new blog name in the final version.
